

Sinclair Broadcasting is advancing its own narrow political agenda by requiring its stations to air a movie highly critical of one presidential candidate (and it's not George Bush).

By allowing it, the FCC can guarantee that television adheres to the same standards as talk radio.

Since government and corporations are now such fast friends, it only remains to convince a few stragglers (liberals) to become compassionate conservatives.

The airing of this motion picture will help.

Congratulations.